Safe physiotherapy thanks to UVC air disinfection

To allow optimum treatment and protection of patients and staff to their physiotherapy practice “Das Physio-Team Puchheim,” managing directors Thomas Maderer and Jenny Habermann have devised a comprehensive hygiene concept.

SteriWhite Air Q115 disinfects room air in the physiotherapy practice.

In addition to standard measures such as regular airing, obligatory face masks for employees and visitors and hand disinfectant dispenser, the team disinfects all contact surfaces after each visit.

In addition, a SteriWhite Air Q115 from Dr. Hönle AG disinfects the air in the training room. There are several reasons why the managing directors chose this very unit. “Just set it up and switch it on. The unit requires no maintenance effort, such as changing filters, and generates no noise. And with its compact, modern design, it fits unobtrusively into our overall concept.”

With this UVC unit, the practice is also well-prepared to eliminate health hazards in the period following the lockdown and post-Corona as it is able to inactivate a lot more than “just” the coronavirus, for example influenza viruses as well as most kinds of bacteria and mould spores, allowing the physiotherapists to treat patients safely and reliably and offer courses such as Redcord®-training in their gymnastics room.
